President's Letter

The May 2008 Annual Meeting was held at the Rentschler Farm Barn. Agnes Dikeman told the assembled group about the Saline Area Historical Society. After the potluck supper, elections were held and Leslie L. Loomans was elected treasurer and Patty Creal was elected as a board member until 2011 replacing Dean Greb who became a Director-at-Large. Joanne Nesbit was elected to fill Les Loomans' position for the Director term ending 2010. We are pleased that Patty has chosen to remain a board member after having devoted more than 15 years as treasurer.

Directors, Susan Nenadic, Susan Wineberg and Cynthia Yao, whose terms expired in 2008, were re-elected to serve until 2011. Dean Greb will serve as a director-at-Large. Additionally, Wayne and Mary Florida were appointed Directors-at-Large.

A committee worked with Bidlack Creative Group and has devised a splendid four-color brochure which you will receive in the fundraising mailing in the near future. We are very pleased with the brochure.

Come and experience a story...

We have several exhibits a year on a variety of topics including kitchens, old bridges, politics, weddings, 150 Years of the YMCA, one-room schools, 100 years of Psychiatry at the University of Michigan, Christmas toys of today and yesterday, and much, much more.

WASHTENAW COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The Museum on Main Street has been telling these stories since 1959, when we opened in a restored 1850s house which was razed in 1999 to permit a new bridge. Identified: The Washtenaw County Historical Society which operates the Museum, has been collecting "things" and stories for much longer - 150 years as of 2007.

THE SUMMER EXHIBITION:

Tying the Knot - Weddings

The gown on the left was worn by Eunice Fitea, the bride of Fielding H. Yost. They were married in 1905 and honeymooned in Cuba. The two piece dress in the center was worn by Lois Burnett Hiscock in 1883 and the gown in the far corner was that of Charlotte Haas Sallade – 1945.

The bridal gown of Ella Travis, bride of Junius Beal, 1898. The gown in the center was her going away dress. The tandem bicycle in the foreground was a wedding gift from Junius to his bride.

In 1925, Dama Godfrey married Cecil Creal in the 114 East Kingsley Godfrey home. Visitors to the exhibition could stand beside the gown and view the Godfrey home where the marriage took place.

The gown at the top of the stairs was worn by Martha Warner, bride of James Campbell, in 1905.

The wedding exhibition has closed. The gowns have been packed away awaiting another event. The cake and cake toppers on loan have been returned. Even the bicycle-built-for-two has been relegated to its off-site storage. But memories and stories of weddings across the years remain.

Museum visitors were surprised that 19th century brides did not usually wear white and shocked that the average wedding today costs $30,000. They added to the list of movies featuring weddings, left their own wedding details for future generations and voted for their favorite dress in the exhibition. While every dress received at least one vote, the ivory lace gown worn by the bride of Fielding H. Yost was the winner.

Two guests left a note in the ballot box saying they "had a better time here than at the Manhattan Transfer or at the Purple Rose." Thank you ladies. Many thanks to all who helped us "tie the knot" successfully.

The Ann Arbor YMCA from 1858 to 2008: Serving the Ann Arbor Community for 150 Years

The Ann Arbor YMCA will celebrate 150 years of community service with an historical display at the Washtenaw County Historical Society's Museum on Main Street starting Wednesday, September 17, 2008. The YMCA's collection of photographs, documents, memorabilia and video interviews with local citizens traces the start of the first YMCA by University of Michigan students to the Ann Arbor YMCA of today.

One of the oldest organizations in Ann Arbor, the YMCA initially served as a place where male students could meet to socialize and hold Bible studies. Over time, the YMCA merged with the Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA) to form an organization where men, women and children of all ages, races, incomes and religions enjoy a variety of recreational programs.

The YMCA exhibit is organized into three distinct areas:

History and Mission of the YMCA in Ann Arbor depicts the founding of the YMCA by university students in 1858 and opening of Lane Hall by the UM-YMCA in 1917. Lane Hall was funded in part by John D. Rockefeller and named for Judge Victor Lane (1852-1930), a Circuit Court judge in Adrian Michigan from 1888-1897 and University of Michigan law professor from 1897-1928. Lane served as president of the University YMCA for many years.

28. LANE HALL, U. OF M., ANN ARBOR, MICH.

Lane Hall, undated

In 1892, the City YMCA was chartered and eventually housed in a new building on North Fourth Avenue from 1904-1959. The exhibit also shows photographs and original documents for the YWCA, which was founded in Ann Arbor in 1894 and eventually housed in the Christian Mack residence on South Fourth Avenue from 1913 to 1959. The YWCA provided rooms, an employment bureau and classes for young women.

Wendell Lyons (1916-1986), Executive Secretary of the YMCA from 1951-1963, was the architect of the movement to merge the Ann Arbor YMCA and YWCA. During the early 1950s the boards of directors of both the YMCA and YWCA recognized the need for new buildings for their respective organizations, and they decided to legally merge into one organization in 1956. The idea of combining these boards was innovative for its time and resulted in the new merged organization being disaffiliated with the National Board of the YWCA.

James (1886-1957) and Verna (1900-1978) Parker were instrumental in the history of the merger of the YM and YWCA in the 1950s. Prior to the YM-YWCA merger, James was Chairman of the Building Committee. He headed the fundraising campaign in 1956 that raised over $1,000,000 within a seven-week period. James Parker did not live to see the new building become a reality; he died in 1957. Verna Parker served in many capacities as a board member of the YWCA. She was president of the board of the merged YM-YWCA from 1956-1959.

Known first as the YM-YWCA and later as the Ann Arbor Y, the new building opened in 1960. The YMCA on South Fifth Avenue was renovated four times and added onto twice between 1959 and 2005. The many transitions in this building were the result of attempts to accommodate social trends of the last 40 years, including an increased emphasis on families, fitness and organized activities.

Milt Kemnitz (1911-2005), local artist, political activist and Ann Arbor YMCA member, painted and drew numerous scenes around Ann Arbor. His paintings, including "Children of the YMCA" and ink drawings of the YMCA's class catalog covers from the late 1980s (1986 and 1988) will be on display.

Hattie A.T. Crippen (1863-1955) was the daughter of Methodist Minister John W. Crippen (1833-1909) and Esther Crippen (1838-1916). Both Hattie and her mother were charter members of the Ann Arbor chapter of the YWCU (later YWCA). They attended the first meeting of the YWCA in 1894, and Hattie became the first president of the Ann Arbor association shortly thereafter. It was a position that she held for five years. "During the first years the activities consisted largely of evening classes in the three R's for those whose schooling had been curtailed by economic necessity, of social good times, and of homelike hours of worship on Sunday afternoons." City directory listings from 1888-1892 show that Hattie was a teacher before the organization was formed; she continued to teach throughout her term at the YWCA. After her parents' death, Hattie continued to live in the family home on Ann Street, taking in boarders. She never married. Hattie died in Saline on December 26, 1955. She is buried alongside her parents at Forest Hill Cemetery in Ann Arbor. Hattie's notes for teaching English grammar and a lecture on the history of tea are among the items that will be on display at the exhibit.

Spirit, Mind, Body: Programs at the YMCA displays memorabilia from the YMCA's sports and fitness programs, including basketball and volleyball items. Volleyball, which was invented at the Holyoke, Massachusetts YMCA in 1895 by instructor William Morgan, was a mix of basketball, tennis and handball, originally called "mintonette". The name "volleyball" came into use in 1896 during an exhibition at the International YMCA Training School in Springfield, Massachusetts, to describe how the ball went back and forth over the net. In 1922, YMCAs held their first national championship in the game. This championship became the U.S. Open in 1924, when non-YMCA teams also competed.

Viggo Nelson (1895-1971) introduced competitive volleyball to Ann Arbor. He was inducted into the Volleyball Hall of Fame in the late 1990s. Viggo served as YMCA General Secretary in Ann Arbor (1919-1931/1934/1936). He was also the Camp Birkett Boys Work Secretary in 1920 and Camp Director (1921-1922.)

Camp Birkett, August 1943

Character Values and Youth Development: Summer Camps features displays from the Ann Arbor YMCA's summer camps, including Camp Birkett, Camp Takona and Camp Al-Gon-Quian.

Camp Birkett is the oldest organized camp in Washtenaw County. Thomas Birkett of Dexter deeded the property, which consists of 11 acres of woods and lake frontage on the east shores of Silver Lake, to the City YMCA in 1914. In 1920, the camp was gifted to the Ann Arbor YMCA, and from 1922 to 1933, the local Kiwanians upgraded the waterfront and built sleeping lodges, a handicraft cabin, a tennis court, and a sanitary system. Originally an all-boys camp, Birkett became a co-ed day camp after the merger of the YMCA and the YWCA in 1959.

Camp Takona, located in Grass Lake near Chelsea, was an all-girls camp owned by the YWCA. The camp first held six-week sessions for up to 40 girls ages 10-16 years old. Each summer the camp held an extra session to enable underprivileged children from the Family Welfare Bureau to take part in recreational and social activities. By the mid-1950s, the camp had both a residence program for girls ages 9-13 and a day camp program for younger girls ages 6-9. In 1972, the Ann Arbor Community Center purchased Camp Takona from the YM-YWCA.

Camp Al-Gon-Quian, located on Burt Lake in northern Lower Michigan, has been in operation since 1926. It began as an all-boys camp run by Herb Twining. The YMCA acquired Camp Al-Gon-Quian in 1968 from Herb Twining's family, and the camp became co-ed in 1969. The camp remains a "...second and never-forgotten home to many." Its 150 acres include wooded areas and shoreline for activities such as swimming, sailing, canoeing, horseback riding, archery, nature study, crafts, and sports.

The Ann Arbor YMCA's 150th anniversary exhibit runs from Wednesday, September 17-Saturday, November 22, 2008.

Antique Novy Family Carriage Donated

Joshua Robert Jacobson, great-great grandson of Dr. F. N.
Novy, ca. 1980.

The Society has received several donations over the summer. Among them is a baby carriage purchased by Dr. Frederick G. Novy for his firstborn son Dr. Robert L. Novy in 1892. Dr. Frederick Novy was the chairman of the University of Michigan Department of Biology, founded in 1902, for more than three decades and then served as Dean of the Medical School from 1935-1937. Dr. Robert L. Novy graduated from the Medical School in 1927 and later became president of Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Michigan.

Information provided by Doranne Jacobson, great-granddaughter of Dr. Frederick Novy, indicates that "virtually everyone associated with the baby carriage has lived in Ann Arbor and graduated from the University of Michigan." The family babies have had their portraits taken in the carriage including her daughter, Dr. Laurie Jacobson who was the first sixth-generation graduate. The child in the adjacent photograph is Laurie Jacobson's brother, Joshua Robert Jacobson.

It has been in the family except for a brief time in 1965 when it was restored by Heidi Shultz, a friend of the family, in 1965 and used briefly for her son. She rebuilt a corner of the carriage and recovered the upholstery and umbrella. A date of 1892 was found on the bottom of the carriage. The patent date on the umbrella is June 17, 1884 and on the umbrella holder, April 1, 1881.

The Society thanks Dorothy Novy Wilson, Doranne Jacobson and Cameron Shultz for their generous donation of the carriage.
